Good morning, I.S 201! This is Nicole from class 851 here for Talk a Lot Tuesday on behalf of the S.E.A.L. Team.

Have you ever heard of the United Nations? The United Nations is an organization formed between multiple countries. It is dedicated to preserving international peace, enforcing friendly relations between countries, and protecting human rights. Today is United Nations Day, a celebration of the day in 1945 when the United Nations was established.

Here's a brief background on the United Nations. The United Nations was put in place after World War II, and it aimed to prevent any future world wars. It replaced the League of Nations, which had become inactive and ineffective. On April 25, 1945, fifty nations met in San Francisco, California for a conference and started planning the Charter of the United Nations, or the UN charter, which outlined the rights and responsibilities of the countries who joined and established the main goals of the United Nations. The UN Charter was adopted on June 25, 1945.

United Nations Day is significant because of its celebration of diversity. It appreciates the diversity of cultures, religions, and languages all over the world. On every October 24, countries join together to spread ideas of peace and harmony among people who come from various backgrounds. United Nations Day is a reminder of the importance of diversity, teamwork between nations, equality, peace, unity, justice, and human rights. All over the world, people come together to celebrate United Nations Day in several different ways. In some countries, parades are organized to encourage happiness to connect people from different places. In other areas, friends and family from different countries share their favorite meals. This is called a united celebration. United celebration promotes coming together as united people to celebrate diversity and love for other cultures and religions.

It is important to celebrate United Nations Day because it is a way of acknowledging this organization's work. The United Nations feeds over 90 million people worldwide, promotes women and child health, helps refugees who are escaping war, and aids in beating climate change. The United Nations does a lot for the world.

Thank you, and have a Together 'Til the End of Time Tuesday!
